For over a decade, I have contributed significantly to the leadership of an interdisciplinary university-based center engaged in three interrelated activities: (1) service-learning based health advocacy education, (2) research and policy grounded in patients' experiences, and (3) community and stakeholder engagement consultation. My legal and policy expertise advance our center's mission to transform the healthcare experience for patients and providers in several ways in the teaching, research, and policy domains.

My extensive stakeholder engagement work is under contract with the UW Madison-Institute for Translational Science Research (ICTR) – Community Academic Partnerships (CAP) Program. I help investigators/clinicians strategically involve patients, families, and other key stakeholders in the design, implementation and evaluation of research and quality improvement efforts. I also support the dissemination of findings and applied tools in accessible, and usable forms for consumers, providers, and policymakers. My approach is grounded in the lived experience of patients navigating the U.S. healthcare system and influenced by insights of challenges facing providers and healthcare leaders today. As a founding member of the Primary care Academics Transforming Healthcare (PATH) Collaborative, I partner with UWHealth primary care physician leaders, researchers, and quality improvement leaders on primary care redesign innovations and dissemination. From 2014-2015, I was a Faculty Fellow in the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Future of Public Health Law Program.

Lawyer's in the Doctor's Office: Partnering to Address Health-Harming Legal Needs

$104,000

Overwhelming evidence demonstrates that socioeconomic factors impact health, leading to deep inequities in health outcomes. Many of these “health-harming social needs” have a legal solution. Yet, 80 percent of the legal needs of people living in poverty go unmet. The health care setting offers patients the safety and privacy to begin conversations and legal issues that might otherwise go unrecognized are identified. This project puts UW law and pre-law students in local health clinics to identify health-harming legal issues patients are facing and provide a spectrum of legal services—preventing legal crises and intervening on active legal issues that place additional financial and health burdens on families.
